ADAM HENCKLER, P.E.

Superintendent of Production Engineering & Facilities (Code 980)
Portsmouth Naval Shipyard

Adam Henckler is the Superintendent of Production Engineering and Facilities (Code 980) Portsmouth Naval Shipyard in Kittery, Maine.

Originally from Bangor, Maine, Adam received his Bachelor of Science degree in Civil Engineering from the University of Maine in 2001, specializing in structural engineering. That same year, he began his professional career at Portsmouth Naval Shipyard in the Structural Engineering Division (Code 250) working on primary structures and hull repair calculations.

After being stuck in Orlando, Florida, for three days following his honeymoon in 2005, Adam and his wife Laura made the decision to take a chance at new careers. They ended up moving to the Orlando area in late 2005 where Adam began as an engineering intern for Bentley Architects and Engineers. He received his professional engineering license a short time later and was quickly promoted through the company up to Vice President of the Structural Engineering Department and partner.

After starting a family, Adam was looking for an opportunity to reduce his work hours, so he returned to federal service in 2009, becoming the Senior Facilities Manager for the F-18 and F-35 flight simulator programs at the Naval Air Warfare Center Training Systems Division in Orlando.

After the birth of their second child, the family decided to return to Maine to be closer to family, and Adam returned to Portsmouth Naval Shipyard working in Code 250 for a short time. He then began a transition into training and development, moving on to stand up the training branch for the Engineering and Training Department (Code 200). During this time, he developed the Peers, Advisors, and Leaders (PAL) mentoring program with a robust series of more than 80 individual development plans to support the growing department. In 2016, he was selected to be the Administrative Division Head for Code 200 where we oversaw training, quality, resources, recruiting, and integrated logistics for the department.

Following his graduation from NAVSEA's Executive Development Program in late 2022, Adam took on his current role as the Code 980 Superintendent.

He currently lives in Cape Neddick, Maine, with his wife and two children, Alyssa and Cameron. Adam is a massive soccer supporter, recently spending time in England seeing his beloved Manchester City club. He is frequently working in his "Hip Hop Wood Shop" working on various furniture projects while listening to hip hop music from the 1990s.

Adam continues to dedicate his personal and professional time to working on people to find the best in everyone. You can follow his coaching journey at AdamHenckler.com.

CONOR D. DIRKS

Partner, Shaw, Bransford & Roth, P.C.

Conor D. Dirks is a Partner at the law firm Shaw Bransford & Roth, where he has practiced law since 2013. Mr. Dirks litigates cases in federal district and appellate courts, and administrative forums such as the U.S. Merit Systems Protection Board, Foreign Service Grievance Board, and U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

Mr. Dirks represents federal employees of all grade levels confronted with proposed disciplinary action, and also advises employees subject to federal investigations, including investigations conducted by Inspectors General, Congress, the Office of Special Counsel, or administrative investigations by the employee's own agency.

In addition to his work on behalf of government employees, Mr. Dirks has successfully defended government agencies against EEO complaints, MSPB appeals of agency disciplinary actions, and Individual Right of Action (IRA) appeals.

Mr. Dirks represents and defends attorneys subjected to investigation of allegations of misconduct and disciplinary proceedings, including Department of Justice attorneys subjected to Office of Professional Responsibility (OPR) proceedings. He also represents individuals throughout the security clearance application and investigation process. In doing so, he helps individuals respond to and contest decisions to suspend or revoke their security clearance.

Mr. Dirks has briefed questions of statutory interpretation and due process at the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit, and has years of experience contesting federal government actions in U.S. District Court and federal administrative forums.

Mr. Dirks also represents federal whistleblowers and has assisted employees in successfully disclosing wrongdoing at their agency to the Office of Special Counsel or to an Inspector General. He has also sought and received corrective action for employees subjected to whistleblower retaliation.

Mr. Dirks has advocated for clients in mediation, and is also a trained mediator and graduate of the mediation skills training at the U.S. Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service. Mr. Dirks currently serves as a mediator in D.C. Superior Court Multi-Door Dispute Resolution mediation program.

Mr. Dirks also authors a weekly column for FEDmanager summarizing recent federal court opinions affecting the federal workforce. His column explains for non-attorneys recent legal developments that will impact disciplinary processes, performance evaluations, due process rights, and other issues relevant to public employment. In addition to his weekly FEDmanager column, Mr. Dirks also writes the Legal Brief, a comprehensive explanation of the biggest cases impacting federal workers, on a quarterly basis in The Federal Manager Magazine.
